Dark Yolk Eggs – You Can See and Taste the Difference!

Dark yolk eggs are beautiful. Deep, dark orange yolks, with a rich, thick texture and a flavor described simply as “what eggs should taste like!”

Whether they are eaten by themselves or included as ingredients in baked goods and eggs dishes, the end results are consistently more beautiful and more delicious.

But their beauty is more than skin deep. Produced exclusively for Sunrise, dark yolk eggs come from hens raised by second-generation egg-man, Henry Markowicz on his ranch above 3,000-foot elevation near Yucaipa in the San Bernardino mountains. The dark rich color of the yolks comes from the proprietary natural feed that Henry provides his 40,000 hens. This feed – the recipe for which is a well-kept secret – is completely vegetarian with added seeds, grains and soybeans. Henry has eliminated the fish and animal by-products that are commonly used for commercially produced eggs – which removes the animal cholesterol from dark yolk eggs.

So, to unscramble dark yolk eggs: beautiful, delicious, local, fresh, natural, better-for you and raised by a cool, chicken-savvy mountain man with a California heritage! That’s no yoke.

Sunrise offers dark yolk eggs through its 52 Your Choice private label.

Keeping It Cool with Temperature Controls

In the next few newsletters, we're going to provide some detail on the food handling and safety enhancements we instituted during our recent HAACP certification process.

One of the fundamentals of food handling and safety is keeping frozen foods frozen, cold foods cold, and ambient temperature items from freezing. At Sunrise, we have built in redundant controls to do just that – from the moment we receive products at our facilities, to staging and storage in the warehouse and throughout our distribution process in our trucks to your door. Managing temperatures in the warehouse is simple and straightforward – we have separate facilities within the warehouse to keep products at their mandated temperatures. To assure that we retain product integrity throughout our distribution process, we've added a new automated control system to our fleet of delivery vehicles. Now we continuously monitor zone temperatures in each of our trucks, with 24-hour monitoring of instant reads and notifications throughout the entire delivery process. This is only one of many process enhancements that we have instituted to maximize our value to our customers.
